

Being able to present your work is a skill.

Being able to present your work is a skill.

- No matter where you go to work, at some point you will have to show your work.
- If you can do this effectively it will lead to personal growth and the ability to get promoted from junior positions.
- If you end up free lancing or working directly with customers, you will have retention of those customers.
- Mainly if you can actually understand their domain and not just the technical domain that you will provide to their business.